Friday, September 22, 2006

Kolter Communities won a variety of PRISM Awards at the recent industry competition. The honors were divided among three of the developer's Southeast Florida communities: Domani, in North Palm Beach; and, in Palm Beach Gardens, San Matera the Gardens and San Merano at Mirasol.

Sponsored by the Gold Coast Builders Association, the competition recognizes outstanding design and achievement in residential and commercial construction in Palm Beach County and South Florida. Honors were announced at the annual gala, held at PGA National Resort & Spa in Palm Beach Gardens.

Under Marketing & Advertising, Kolter captured two first-place Gold PRISM Awards for San Matera the Gardens. These were for a "direct-mail piece for consumer promotion" and a "black-and-white newspaper advertisement."

Silver PRISMs went to Kolter for the "logo design" for San Matera the Gardens and for a "brochure for an individual builder or associate" for San Merano at Mirasol.

Three additional Silver Awards went to Domani for a "brochure for a community or developer," "Web site" and "overall advertising campaign for a builder."

"It is an honor for Kolter to be recognized in this way by our peers. We constantly strive to achieve the finest detail in all aspects of our business," said Kolter Vice President Mary Kay Willson.

According to Cotton & Company COO Laurie Andrews, the awards honored work Cotton & Company has done during the past year for Treviso Bay, Sail Club Clear Lake, Dreaming Turks and Caicos, Pukka Development at Ocean Bay and multiple awards for Kolter's San Matera and Taylor Woodrow.

Also receiving PRISM Awards were Coastal Design and Development Group and Building Solutions.

Coastal Design and Development Group won a Silver Award for architecture and design for its Village Grande project in Delray Beach.

Building Solutions' Keri Morrison was named the 2006 Gold Salesperson of the Year; the sales team of Morrison, Sue Magee and Eva Redman won a Silver Award; and Morrison and John Sholar were recognized for their individual sales.
